Kamijo teaches a typical fuel rail system using a check valve to prevent backflow toward the pump. Since reciprocating pumps such as the one used in Kamijo are commonly used to feed fuel rails it would have been obvious to use such a pump, and its required check valve (preventing backflow on the intake stroke), in Kimitaka.

Claims 10-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kimitaka and Palma as applied to claim 2 above, and further in view of Kamijo.

Kimitaka, Palma and Kamijo apply as noted above and would have been obvious to combine because they show independent features of the fuel system.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Kimitaka (JP('464)).

In particular, the English Abstract teaches all the imitations of Claim 1.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2-5 and 7-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kimitaka in view of Palma.

Kimitaka applies as noted and Palma teaches the structure of the claimed valve.

It would have been obvious to modify Kimitaka by using the valve of Palma to control the fluid flow since both systems used high-pressure fluid flow such as that found in fuel systems.

Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kimitaka in view of Kamijo.
